THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

A National Convention of the Republican party will meet at Chicago, Wednesday, the 24th of June next, for the nomination of candidates to be supported for President and Vice President at the next election.

Republicans, and all who will co-operate with them in supporting the nominee of the party, are invited to choose two delegates from each Congressional District, four at large from each State, two from each Territory, and two from the District of Columbia, to represent them in the Convention.

J. D. CAMERON, Chairman. THOMAS B. KEOGH, Secretary.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

ROOMS OF THE REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE, MILWAUKEE, February 13, 1880.

A State Convention of delegates representing the Republican party of Wisconsin, and of all who will co-operate with them in supporting the nominee of the party, is hereby called to meet at the Capitol in Madison, at twelve o'clock P. M. on Wednesday, May 20th, 1880, for the purpose of placing in nomination an electoral ticket of ten electors to be supported by the party at the next Presidential election, and also to select twenty delegates, (two from each Congressional District and four from the State at large), to represent the Republican party of Wisconsin in the National Republican Convention, which is called to meet at Chicago on the 24th of June, A. D. 1880, and to transact such other business as may be deemed necessary.

Each Senate and Assembly District is entitled to two delegates in the Convention.

R. H. BAKER, Chairman. T. D. WEEKS, CHAS. LUDING, H. PALMER, G. W. CARTER, J. H. KEYS, JAMES H. FOSTER, F. L. SPOONER, JR., L. B. SALES, J. H. WAGGONER, H. A. GRIFFIN, E. BOWEN, F. A. HOOPER, J. R. BRIDGEMAN, S. W. HUNT, L. F. FISKE, H. O. FAIRCHILD, State Central Committee.

General Hancock is willing to be the "dark horse" for the Democratic party.

The good nature of the Republicans is a source of annoyance to the Democracy.

It appears from Democratic statements that the Democratic party has an ugly prospect before it.

The ability with which the Democracy can blunder challenges the combined efforts of all other political organizations.

The Republicans will not lack for campaign material this year. The Democrats are engaged in telling the truth about themselves.

It is still noticeable that no Democratic paper has yet mustered up courage to predict that there will be a Democratic victory this fall.

A letter was addressed the other day to "Plumed Knight, United States Senate, Washington, D. C." It was intended for James G. Blaine, and he got it.

With all the talk about the Grant and Blaine booms, there is a strong feeling, and it is still growing, that Washburne would be the better and the stronger candidate.

Chief Justice Ryan, who has so many times been sick beyond recovery, is rapidly improving, and is out of danger. It may as well be understood that he will beat any doctor in the State.

The total cost for the employees for the Legislature of 1879, was $22,461.65, of which $11,511.25 belonged to the Senate, and $10,950.40 to the Assembly. The cost of the employees for the session of 1879, was $17,501.00.

General Garfield is a little too fond of gaining the name of being a "good fellow" by tickling the other side. There is a time to compromise, but it is not now the business of the Republican party to make a hole for the Democrats to crawl through.

The last Legislature enacted a law authorizing the hail insurance companies of other States to do business in Wisconsin. These companies are doing a large business in certain portions of the country, and where hail storms do a great amount of damage to grain, such insurance becomes of great importance. The law provides that the companies shall be put upon the same footing as foreign fire companies.

The Committee on Commerce, of the House of Representatives, gave a hearing on Tuesday to several gentlemen from this State, on the subject of the reservoir system. The system aims to keep a continuous supply of water in the upper Mississippi so as to have uninterrupted navigation. The dams over the outlets of the lakes and tributaries, by which the rains of winter and spring can be retained and utilized, will cost about $1,500,000, beside $500,000 for damage to private property. This hearing will be continued, and the strongest possible arguments will be brought to bear upon the Committee, to report favorably upon the bill. Such questions are slowly considered, and it is doubtful if any real progress will be made by Congress in this direction this session.

We suspect that the investigating committee, which Governor Smith will appoint to investigate the management of the State Hospital, will find it an interesting piece of business. At the letter which Senator J. B. Bennett, of Watertown, wrote to H. H. Giles, on Monday, states the facts, there will be some queer revelations as the result of a thorough investigation of that institution. Senator Bennett takes occasion to say that the extravagance practiced in that hospital would not be tolerated in private business, and the public is beginning to suspect that he is about right. The hospital has no right to pay $104.50 for a lumber wagon when the best

GREEN BAY, March 23—John Jumps, aged 26, while cutting timber in a wood near Wrightstown, was struck on the head by a falling tree and his skull crushed, causing instant death.

WATER ROUTES.

The Reservoir System Before the Committee on Commerce.

WASHINGTON, March 23—The Representatives from Wisconsin and Minnesota appeared before the House Committee this morning to argue in favor of an appropriation of $500,000 to construct a system of reservoirs, by which it is proposed to keep up a continuous supply of water in the Upper Mississippi River, so as to have uninterrupted navigation throughout the whole year. The plan of the construction of a series of great dams over the outlets of the lakes and tributaries that pour their waters into the upper Mississippi, by which the rains of the winter and spring months can be retained and utilized. The cost of the system is estimated at $1,500,000, and the damages to private property at $500,000. Its general feature were explained and advocated this morning by Mr. Pound, Representative from Wisconsin, and by Mr. Walker, Congressman from Washburn, of Minnesota, and Mr. Williams of Wisconsin, who will be heard to-morrow.

GRANT'S ARRIVAL

And Reception by the Authorities at Galveston, Texas.

GALVESTON, March 23—When the steamship City of Mexico hove near enough for identification beyond question, Captain Irying's steamship Estelle and Maddox, and the revenue cutter McLean, which were ready with steam up, hastened to the outer roads, and then the ship dropped anchor and the Estelle threw a line aboard and made fast on one side, while the cutter worked up on the other, but the sea being rough and the City of Mexico not having settled, could not make fast. Therefore General Grant and party jumped aboard the Estelle and came rapidly toward the city, escorted by a committee of citizens, railway officials, steamship agents, and newspaper men. At 3:10 the little tug, which is only thirty feet long by ten wide, drew up to in front of the steamer Colorado, of the Mallory New York line, and the Galveston Artillery, under command of Captain M. F. Mott, of the law firm of Ballinger, Jack & Mott, and Lieutenant Brittingham, business manager of the News, and midshipman in the United States navy until the accession, then a lieutenant in the Confederate navy, fired a national salute. While they were disembarking on the wharf, Mayor Leonard, Mr. H. C. Pratt, lawyer, Colonel Sinclair, Internal Revenue Collector; Mr. Kopper, coffee importer, and Captain Sawyer Mallory, line agent, shook hands with the General.

The Mayor said: "GENERAL GRANT: As Mayor of the city of Galveston, I am delighted and empowered to extend you a welcome, and seeing that you and party are here, I will wait a few minutes during your sojourn. Yet allow me to say, we are glad to have you on American soil again; yes, doubly glad, considering the great usefulness manifested throughout the country during the prevalence of the storm on Sunday."

General Grant responded as follows: "Thank you sir. We are tired, yet feel rejoiced at again reaching home. I am glad to be in Texas, though I have been here before and know it to be a great country. Thank you Mr. Leonard for your forbearance."

The carriages by this time having crowded through the maw of humanity, they were entered and driven off, but not before a crowd of colored women had grasped the wheels of the General's carriage, prayed for God's blessing upon him, and asked to shake hands with him, but before he could do so, "all forward" was ordered, and the crowd pressed back by the police, and the procession moved up Twenty-fourth street to Broadway, west on Twenty-fourth, north to Market, west on Market to Twenty-second, south on Twenty-second to Church, to the Tremont Hotel, passing through streets lined and jammed with people, white and black intermingling without a single murmur. The procession itself, owing to late rains and muddy streets, was not so extensive as expected, yet it was very creditable, being formed of the Galveston Artillery, Washington Guards, and the Griffith riders, the latter colored.

Reaching the Tremont hotel, one vast cheer for General Grant was given with a will, General Grant acknowledging with a profound bow his uncovered head.

MRS. CHRISTLANCY.

She Plays a Joke on the Washington Doctors.

WASHINGTON, March 23—About noon to-day a man burst into the office of the health officer of the District and exclaimed that Mrs. ex-Senator Christlancy had taken poison. The doctor rushed at once to her mother's house, which is near by, and on the way met other physicians who had been summoned. When they reached the house they were informed that Mrs. Christlancy had said she had taken poison, but had afterward acknowledged that she was joking, but not until several messengers had been dispatched for physicians. The doctors do not see the joke.

A MURDER TRIAL.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 23—The most important murder trial held in Minnesota for several years, commenced to-day at Long Prairie, Todd county, before Judge McKilly, of the District Court. The prisoner is Michael Meide, brother of John Meide, who was hanged in Long Prairie last November for the murder of two men named Kalaway and Sleinhuber, in which both brothers were implicated. Meide has since been in prison in Stearns county. Attorney General Start has gone up to Long Prairie. It is evident the prosecution for the State expect to have difficulty in fixing the crime upon Meide, because there is no living witness of the deed, and the evidence is all circumstantial. The wife of Kalaway, who caused the quarrel that led to the murder, by deserting him to live with Meide, has been spirited away to Wisconsin. The prosecution will endeavor to prove a conspiracy to murder, and supplement this with the confession of John Meide before his death at the hands of the lynchers.

A DUEL HINTED AT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 23—Senator Kellogg concluded his speech yesterday in these words: "Sir, I am willing to compare my character, morally or otherwise, with that of the senator from Georgia (Hill), and if it comes to be a matter of moral or personal courage, the bitterest enemy I have in my own State of Georgia, I am quite sure would not fail to concede that I stand immeasurably his superior." Governor Kellogg, being from a State where the code is still in vogue, was to-day approached by a friend of Hill's and asked in a delicate way whether he was prepared to stand by his words after the approved Southern fashion. Governor Kellogg responded in terms that left no doubt in his questioner's mind that Senator Hill could have all the satisfaction he might desire for asking.

A SUIT FOR LIBEL.

OSHKOSH, March 23—It is learned from reliable authority that Rev G C Hadcock, of Milwaukee, will begin suit for libel against the proprietor of The Standard, a weekly paper of this city, for the publication of a slanderous document in the nature of an interview with Philip Blank, of the town of Byron, wherein all of the alleged meetings and transactions of Mr. Hadcock at Blank's house with Miss Jennie Chase were shown up. The article was published in the form of an "extra" and was distributed broadcast over the city and elsewhere. At the time it created, no little talk in family circles, and Mr. Hadcock's friends took great exceptions to it. In fact there were few people who countenanced it at all.

A MONSTROSITY.

GREEN BAY, March 23—To-day some boys found the dead body of a newly born infant in a box floating in the river at the southern end of this city. The child was a monstrosity. The top of its head, from the forehead, was perfectly flat, slanting down to below the level of its ears, the latter being remarkably large. The forehead was high and bulging and the eyes set high up in it. There was no neck, the head resting directly upon the body. The body and limbs were natural and well proportioned. An official inquiry was held, but nothing was elicited beyond the statement of a physician, that the infant was a full term child, born alive, and that under any circumstances it could not have lived but a few days.

OBITUARY.

MILWAUKEE, March 23—Hon Anson C Allen, who, as a member of last year's Legislature, was quite prominent as one of Senator Carpenter's best supporters, died this morning after a brief illness. His death resulted from heart disease. Mr. Allen was a young man of quite brilliant political prospects. He was a member of the chamber of commerce and a prominent member of several secret societies. Mr. Allen had about $34,000 insurance upon his life.

SENTENCED.

DETROIT, March 23—Colonel Oscar Lockhead, commander of the Third Regiment Michigan State Militia, and book-keeper of the Citizens' National Bank of Flint, convicted of falsifying the entries on the books of the bank, was to-day sentenced to five years in the Detroit House of Correction.

FULTON.

—The winter wheat looks sick. That which Mr Porter covered with straw is as green as when first covered. He has 40 acres nearly all covered with a thin coat, which protects against frost and summer drought. He tried experiments last year and found that the heavy coat of straw was best, while a light coat was better than none.

—During last week and this our pastor, Rev May, assisted by Mr Plant, a Bible reader, held a series of meetings which were well attended.

—The new bell which now hangs "high in the belfry" ring forth, so that all of the —Last week we attended the caucus held at Indian Ford, R T Powell was appointed chairman. The meeting was very "lively" to put it mild.

THE CAUCUS.

Mr Pease, of Fulton, was nominated for chairman of the town, after which the rest of the town officers were nominated in a hurry. Before appointing the delegates for Assembly, a division of the house was taken for Grant or Blaine and were surprised to see the Grant side of the house crowded, while the Blaine side had not a half dozen out of 85 voters.

Nominated for Assembly District convention: George E Cowan, E Wixon, R T Powell, Henry Brace, Oscar Rowe.

HERE WE GO AGAIN

No use of talking—have got to have a guardian appointed to keep us from giving away goods.

Every day, rain or snow, mud or slush, they will come in and buy something, if nothing more than a box of ten cent collars.

When a fellow gets up on his ear, and hitches four horses and a mule to a stone boat, to come through the mud for a new suit of clothes, it shows that he means business. We should have sold the suit to him all the same if he had taken only one horse and then walked in. Receiving goods every day for little old men, big young boys, and large sized infants. We keep good goods to sell, and sell good goods for keeps. One more lot of those twenty-five cent overalls, just received from the Hub.

Fifty dozen more of those ten cent socks. Goods sent by telephone or on postal cards when desired, if cash comes with the order.

Ole Bull's Castle in Iowa.

New Bergen (Iowa) Letter to the Titusville (Pa.) Herald.

About thirty or thirty-five years ago Ole Bull, the Norwegian violinist, with one of those idiosyncrasies peculiar to men of genius, turned his attention to colonizing and speculations in lumber. Engaging a number of his countrymen, who had reached New York on their way to the fertile fields of the West, he brought them here, laid out a city, and erected cabins for their use. He purchased an immense tract of land in this region from persons in New York, and made preparations to open up the forests on a grand scale. About six miles below here, on Kettle creek, high up on the summit of the mountains, he built for himself a home. Endeavoring to implant in this wilderness some memories of the land he had left, he constructed a castle and furnished it with all the embellishments that could be imported into this out-of-the-way place. A beautiful road winding up the mountain side on a gradual ascent led to his retreat. Artists were brought from afar to add to the splendor of his castle, and the painter and glider gave their handwork to complete the structure, while paper of the most expensive kind covered the walls and added its charms to the edifice. One mammoth room was set apart as the concert hall, and here Ole Bull exercised all his ingenuity in its decoration. The roof was composed of glass, and the barbaric splendor was well calculated to make one forget the outside surroundings and yield themselves to the subtle strains of the violin and enter with spirit into the gayeties and festivities with which Ole Bull tried to surround himself.

But all this was doomed to molder and decay. Before the artisans had yet ceased their labor trouble began to show itself. Dissatisfaction began to manifest itself among those who had come with him to this land, and although he expended money freely, and tried to bring peace and harmony among his retainers, the spark of rebellion would not vanish. About this time too, he discovered that the title to his land was not worth the cost of its writing. He had bought it from persons who had no claim on it whatever, and now the real owner came forward and asserted his rights. Overwhelmed by the thickening troubles that came upon him, he suddenly abandoned all, and reappeared again among the haunts of civilization, and with his beloved violin as his companion began to retrieve his lost fortune by treading the boards behind the footlights.

The colony he had brought with him, being left without a leader, gradually broke up and became scattered far and wide. Now scarcely one remains behind to tell the story and record the history of New Bergen. The castle on the mountain top suffered from the ravages of time and the despoliation of the curiosity seeker. Hundreds visited the place, and most all carry away some mementos of this 'Ole Bull's folly,' till now scarcely a log remains to mark the spot. The only reminder of the past is the name of the little village that clusters around the foot of the mountain. It is called Oleons, which is supposed to be what remains after the 'shortening process' of 'Ole-owns-it.'

SNOW IN DAKOTA.

S. A. Gowley, of the firm of Carpenter & Gowley, drops us a few lines from New Buffalo, Dakota, in which he says:
"I have just received the weekly Gazette only one week from the press, and one cannot complain of being far from home, when he can receive all the news, and have it on the road only a week in the winter. The weather here to-day is very warm and has been improving steadily for two days. The mercury indicated 24 degrees below zero on the 16th, and snow is of sufficient depth to render sleighing good. The country is very level and we can see a train eighteen miles west on the railroad. Snow is found from two to eight feet deep around the depot, and when we got out of the car, we stepped out upon a snow bank and then from the snow bank down into the depot, but on the level it is only from three to four inches deep."

SEASONED SOLDIERS.
The old soldiers met again last evening at the Council chamber to make further arrangements for attending the reunion in Milwaukee next June, as an organized delegation from Rock county. Dr. Henry Palmer presided and John McCulloch served as Secretary. A permanent organization was effected by making those officers permanent ones, and choosing an Executive Committee consisting of T. T. Croft, Chairman, R. P. Young, W. B. Britton, John McCulloch, and H. C. Hadley.

Commanding officers were chosen as follows: Colonel, W. B. Britton, Major, S. C. Cobb, Adjutant, T. T. Croft.

The reports of the Committee showed that about 400 names of ex-soldiers had been obtained, and the work was still going on. This indicates that Rock county will send a goodly sized representation to the reunion. Those who have not already opened communication with headquarters should inform the Committee as early as possible, that full arrangements may be made to accommodate all.

STROLL AMONG THE SCHOOLS.

A Glance at Some of the Teachers and Scholars—A Good Work in Progress.

Yesterday afternoon we accepted the invitation of Mr. Sherer, Clerk of the Board of Education, and in company with Commissioner Daly, took a short stroll among the schools. Climbing the hill to the highest seat of learning in the city, the High School in a double sense, we had the satisfaction of passing through all the different grades without an examination. The building itself is a model of neatness, and bespeaks not only the care which Janitor Hill has for it, but also the successful indoctrination of the children into the belief that cleanliness ranks close to godliness. Such relics of the dark ages as dried-up spit-balls clinging to the ceiling, old benches strewed with the carvings of embryonic presidents, and fly traps cut in the desks—all these have passed away, and in their place appears such models of beauty and neatness, as surely must have an effect to better the habits and purify the thoughts of those who come in daily contact with these silent teachers.

One of the most interesting features of work is that of the primary departments. Many think that almost anybody will do to teach the primaries, but the importance of getting a pupil started right is recognized by all true educators. The primary departments here are fortunately in good hands, Miss Lina Bates having charge of one room, and Miss Drake of the other. In no rooms in the building did there seem to be better order, and all seemed to be attending strictly to business. In Miss Bates' room the children were having a reading exercise. Each child had a copy of a sort of newspaper, published for the benefit of the city schools, and containing selections for reading exercises, compiled by Miss Howard. It was a test day to see whether they could pick up new pieces and read them with any expression. It was astonishing how these little folk could walk through the columns of that paper. It seemed as if they would stumble over some of the four-jointed words and break their necks, but they didn't. They showed clearly that they had not been taught to read parrot fashion.

Stepping into the intermediate rooms we found Miss Sisson's scholars being quizzed on geography. It would shame many older people to hear these little folk locate so many geographical points, and they showed a better knowledge of the cities, towns, rivers, etc., of our State than have some of the boys and girls of a larger growth. It saddened us to think, though, of what the coming youth will have to learn in geography. In times gone by the boys could do away with the whole of the West by calling it an unexplored territory, unhabited by the Redskins. Now there are States, towns, rivers and so on, making a thousand questions and answers, where before there was less than a score, and still new States are being organized, new cities are rising, and we feel like extending our sympathies now to the coming boy and girl. If the boys and girls are wise they will hurry up and get through geography, before it grows much more.

The other intermediate room is presided over by Miss Moutt. Here there was a spelling exercise. The scholars were wrestling with such words as—"omnibus, glimpse, kitchen, proceeded, difficulties, and recommended." In some cases definitions were asked for, and all seemed wide awake and in earnest.
In the Grammar rooms there seemed to be good work in progress. Miss Grubb was putting her scholars through a language exercise. Miss Hatherell was engaged in a like work. The pupils under the drill being given in each room, must be getting some very practical ideas concerning the English. One cannot but be impressed here with the improvement in the methods of teaching as compared with the days when long, meaningless rules were crowded into the memory, as close and lifeless as sardines in a box. In Miss Zeininger's room a spelling exercise had just begun, the pupils writing out the words on the slates, and thus accomplishing a double purpose. We could not wait for the result, but by their eager application to the task a successful result seemed certain. In Miss Godden's room there was a reading exercise in which the pupils showed proficiency. The room was crowded and new desks have been put in to accommodate the increased numbers.

Passing into the High School department we found Prof. Burton in charge. In one of the recitation rooms, Miss Howard was reviewing the graduating class in grammar, preparatory to their examination by the County Superintendent next week. In another room was another grade under the instruction of Miss Meadows, wrestling with problems in higher arithmetic. In the other recitation room Miss Pett was reviewing a class in Latin. There was throughout the departments an air of earnest, steady work, and faultless order becoming older pupils. The method of dismissing the school at 3 o'clock had a military precision to it, and as the scholars passed out, we hurried over to the Second Ward building.

Here Mrs. Dutton, a new accession to the corps of teachers, was in charge. She was conducting a class in geography, map drawing, etc. The scholars were well up in their lessons, and seemed enthusiastic. In the other room Miss Ormsby was conducting an interesting language exercise, which called out from the children their practical knowledge. They gave original sentences bringing in conjunctions, prepositions, etc., in a way that showed that they understood the distinctions. The other departments had been dismissed at an earlier hour, so that we did not get a chance to see their workings.

Such a hurried call at the school rooms impresses one with the fact that good honest work is being done. One notices little things with which fault could be found, and which could perhaps be justly criticized, for neither teachers nor pupils are faultless, nor are critics, yet a half-day's visit to the city schools cannot but cause one to be favorably impressed with them. Some of the rooms are too crowded, and further accommodation is being given by putting in new seats, which seems a necessity, and yet it is a sad necessity.

The rooms as originally arranged provide for all the pupils which one teacher can well care for, and the possibility of endangering health renders it advisable to devise some other mode of accommodating pupils. The ventilation is none too good, either. The rooms are kept at an average 65 degrees as practicable, but the air in some rooms seemed close and hot. There are some petty faults in teachers and in pupils also seen, but these will always be found in all schools this side of heaven, and were not important enough to particularize. In the hasty glance at merits and demerits, the merits win by an overwhelming majority.

MACALISTER ON ART.

Some Very Practical Talk Concerning the Decorations of Home.

Last evening Prof. MacAlister delivered another lecture on art, and was greeted by a large and attentive audience. It being the last of the series of lectures, he made a rapid review of the ground he had passed over, and gave a hurried historical glance at the progress of the art. The latter part of his lecture was peculiarly interesting, as he presented many practical thoughts concerning art, some of his views being such as a man would hardly dare to present, unless like the speaker, he was an acknowledged master of the subject. He spoke of chromes. He said folks of course smiled when that word was mentioned in connection with art, for one could go into almost any store and get a chrome for nothing, by buying a pound of tea, or some such small purchase. There was a flood of cheap chromes, and yet it was a fact that there were chromes, which were high works of art, and should not be sneered at because of the multiplicity of cheap ones. Some of the finest specimens of art were chromes.

In this connection he spoke of Prang's early life, how as a poor German boy he arrived in this country with only twenty-five cents in his pocket, and the wonderful success that he had won. He said that nine-tenths of his chromes went to Europe to hang in the homes of the wealthiest families there. In the front parlor of the home of one of the wealthiest ladies in the State, residing in Milwaukee, there was upon the wall a picture which stood forth prominent among the many costly paintings, and choice engravings which that lady, in her passion and appreciation of art, had collected at a great expense. That picture attracted the attention and admiration of all who looked at the valuable collection, and yet it was a chrome. Among the visitors to his own home was an English gentleman of means and culture, and as he sat in the parlor he became lost in admiration for a certain picture on the wall. He studied its beauty for an hour, and at last asked about that "painting." He was told that it was a chrome, and almost became angry, thinking he was being joked. At the Centennial there appeared one of De Hoar's celebrated marine paintings. Beside it, in exactly the same kind of a frame, hung Prang's chrome. Thousands upon thousands, including many connoisseurs, viewed the two pictures, and yet none could tell which was the painting, and which the chrome, though one was valued at a fabulous sum, and the other was within the means of people of only moderate incomes. The speaker urged those who were to buy pictures for their homes to get good chromes, or else choice engravings, rather than purchase the cheap oil paintings for sale at auctions. They were infinitely to be preferred to dubs.

After buying a picture it ought not to be spoiled by putting it in a gilt frame. Get a good solid frame of oak, or of ash. Pine, oiled or varnished, makes an excellent frame. In framing engravings the print should not be allowed to come in contact with the glass. Then the picture would not become discolored or fade. The engravings should be mounted on sketches the same as an oil painting.

The Professor showed a small picture already framed in oak. He said it was one which hung in his parlor. It was a pleasing picture, and after the audience had admired it, and he had paid a tribute to it as a work of art, he surprised the audience by answering the question as to where it came from. That picture was one of the frontispieces in Harper's Bazar! He had cut it out, placed it on a stretcher, and had it framed. It indeed proved the truth of what he asserted in the former lecture, that many of these pictures in the periodicals were really works of art, and could be used for beautiful decorations.

The lecturer also gave some valuable thoughts on wall paper. He denounced the tutor for expensive wall paper. It was impossible to hang pictures with good effect upon walls covered with these expensive papers, having all sorts of designs, landscapes, figures, etc. Good pictures could never show to advantage on walls thus papered. A simple, unostentatious wall paper was far preferable. One might have rich daisies and frizzes, but the intervening space, where the pictures were hung should be papered simply. To try to have rich paper and intricate designs, and have good pictures on the same wall, was as impossible as to mix water and oil.

These are but a few of the many practical thoughts given by the speaker. Some of them were greeted with enthusiastic applause, and the whole subject was presented in a way which could not but interest, and set the hearers to thinking. The course of lectures have proved of much good to the art lovers of this city, and to the public generally, and it is to be hoped that still more will be heard from the same speaker in the future.

QUICK TIME.

A few days ago the Gazette chronicled the fact that the Harris Manufacturing Company had shipped a car load of their Leader reapers to Mexico. The Company were very anxious to get them into New Orleans in time to have them take the steamer which is to sail on the 29th, for any delay preventing this would cause the reapers to arrive in Mexico too late for the harvest. The case being an urgent one, the Company telegraphed to H. Tucker, the General Freight Agent of the Illinois Central railroad to crowd the carload of reapers over the road as speedily as possible. He did. The carload left Janesville on the night of the 13th, and reached Chicago the following day, the Chicago & Northwestern transferring the freight to the Illinois Central at 1:30 o'clock on the afternoon of that day. The Illinois Central took the car out of Chicago on the evening of the 19th, and sent it through to New Orleans with a rush, so that it arrived there on the morning of the 23d. That is what we call rushing business, and General Freight Agent Tucker merits a long credit mark for his enterprise in thus making the best time on record. Shippers who want quick transit for goods should bear the Illinois Central in mind. This instance is an example of their enterprise and accommodation, and it deserves to go on record. It is just like the wide-awake and good natured Mr. Tucker, and speaks in high praise of the shipping facilities of the road.
